Cheerful Republicans.

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Press has had interesting interviews with representative citizens of Illinois, California and West Virginia, all of whom predict that their states will come up strongly Republican in November. This much has been expected of the states mentioned, but it is comforting to know that prominent men in the party feel the enthusiasm of victory already, and can give reasons for the faith that is in them. Representative Cannon, of Illinois, states that while the Republicans have a tough proposition on their hands in that state, they will come out all right. Illinois like West Virginia, is handicapped by a Democratic gerrymander of congressional districts, which in the former case amounts to almost 100,000 votes in favor of the Democracy. "By a rigorous effort, however," says Mr. Cannon, "we will pull through, and Illinois will go for McKinley and Roosevelt. I do not believe that the nomination of Mr. Stevenson has helped the Democrats in Illinois, nor will it bring much strength to the Democratic party anywhere else."

In regard to California, Superintendent of Public Instruction Thomas J. Kirk, takes a positive view of complete Republican success this fall. In an interview he expresses himself as follows: "I look for the return of a united congressional delegation from all of our seven districts in the Second district, represented by Mr. De Vries in the last Congress, the only Democrat in the delegation, the Republicans have made up their minds to carry it. It is nominally Republican, and a strong candidate will be put up. There was also a large Populist element in some of the other congressional districts, and those who left the Republican party to join it have returned. "In California, Mr. McKinley is personally the most popular President we have ever had. The people like him. They will manifest this personal regard and will sustain his administration by a majority which I estimate at 20,000. This may seem high, but I desire to emphasize the fact that we Pacific coasters are for McKinley and expansion, first, last and all the time. "All that has been said about the good times on the coast is true. California a few years ago was overrun with tramps and men out of employment. Today, labor is scarce. Our fruit growers want no changes in the tariff laws, which have enabled our agricultural population to thrive and build up a mighty business in fruit."

The same correspondent had a talk with Mr. Arnold C. Scherr, of this state, who is in Washington. Mr. Scherr expresses himself as confident that West Virginia will roll up a larger majority than it has ever yet given the Republican ticket. The recently chosen candidate for auditor on the Republican ticket told the correspondent of the Press that the state organization was in fine shape and the party completely united. "As for the Democrats," said he, "they spend most of their time trying to find out where they are, and when they become too much perplexed they settle the question by coming over to us. We have had a great influx of people by reason of our recently developed resources, and of these a conservative estimate places them at seven Republicans out of ten voters."

"The President's policy meets with our approval. I can say affirmatively that our people are not deceived by the specious cry of 'imperialism,' and as we have things to sell we want markets in which to place them. As a party we will rally to the support of the policy of expansion."

Between Belief and Doubt.

The Chinese situation is relieved of only a few discouraging phases. The taking of Tien Tsin by the allied forces and the driving of the Chinese into the open plain is a distinct success, although it was gained at fearful cost. According to army officers the moral effect of a defeat of the allies at Tien Tsin would have been most terrible, as it would, no doubt, have encouraged the boxers, and the uprising would have extended to all parts of China. It is to be hoped that the advantage gained here will be maintained as it cannot but help aid operations elsewhere.

Again we are told that the foreign ministers, including Mr. Conger, are safe. This information comes through a cable to the Chinese minister at London, and transmitted to Minister Wu at Washington. It apparently bears the stamp of coming from official sources, and while the Washington officials are willing to believe the best with regard to the situation, a feeling of doubt still remains. The news from Pekin has been so conflicting and contradictory that information that receives credibility must be distinctly corroborated. It is possible that the horrible tales of butchery may have been built on an isolated case, and the exaggerations manufactured by sensational correspondents. At least it is the one hope to indulge in and the only comfort that can be entertained at the present time when belief is still hanging on doubt.

The appointment of Li Hung Chang as viceroy of the great province of Chi Li, which contains Pekin and the breeding ground of the boxer revolt, is reassuring, as he replaces a man who is notoriously anti-foreign in his sentiments and in deep sympathy with the blood-thirsty boxers. Although Li Hung Chang is an accomplished diplomatist and regarded as a great statesman, too much must not be expected of him. Besides he has a habit of always looking out for himself first.

The sensational report from London that China has declared war on Russia can be taken with many grains of salt. Even if it was undoubtedly true it will not tend either to lighten or aggravate the situation. While Russia has been the largest encroacher on Chinese territory a declaration of war against her at this moment would simply mean a declaration against the combined civilized powers. As to the attitude of the United States, while there is a calmer feeling in Washington, and the cabinet has decided there is no demand at present for an extra session of Congress, the prospects of clearer skies in China at an early date are not looked forward to with confidence. On the contrary the war department is furnishing winter equipments to troops now being sent to the orient, which indicate a belief that a long and desperate struggle is ahead before the disorders are effectually composed.

Gain in Circulation.

As a direct result of the refunding law passed by Congress at its last session the national bank note circulation has risen to a higher point than at any time since 1855. This has been secured by the provision in the law in adding to the margin of profit on bond-secured circulation by the issue of the new 2 per cent bonds and the reduction in the tax upon bank note circulation. The circulation secured by bonds on the first day of January, 1895, was $274,466,748. There was a steady downward tendency until November, 1899, when the bond-secured circulation had fallen to $124,958,726 and the banks had deposited in the treasury $54,796,907 in lawful money for the retirement of the notes still outstanding. There were periods of recovery in the bond-secured circulation during the next few years, especially after the four bond issues of Mr. Cleveland's administration, but the close of December, 1899, found the bond-secured circulation at $299,769,955. The circulation secured by bonds on Saturday last was $277,956,105, or an increase of about $68,000,000. The circulation secured by lawful money and in process of retirement has fallen from $36,435,538 at the close of last year to $34,538,128 at the present time, making the total national bank note circulation $312,494,233.

This increase, however, does not show the entire effect of the refunding law in swelling the circulation, as the banks are entitled upon the bonds which have been deposited to about $11,200,000 more circulation than they have actually received. The reason for the discrepancy is the delay at the bureau of engraving and printing in preparing plates and printing notes for the small banks recently established, and the old banks who are compelled by the new law to reduce their circulation of notes for $5 to one-third of their total issues.

"This increase in bank note circulation," says the Journal of Commerce, "representing already an actual increase of about $71,000,000 over the amount on August 1, 1899, and promising a further increase of perhaps $15,000,000 before the crop saving season is at an end, is giving great confidence to the treasury officials in regard to meeting the demands for money this autumn. Several other events connected with the policy of Secretary Gage for keeping the surplus under control have contributed to put money into the market and take it out of the treasury."

Li Hung Chang is taking his time getting to Pekin. Li is looking out first about his own skin, and his recent interview with a London correspondent stamps him as an old coward.

Johnnie McGraw in the flush of the summer campaign declares that the only way the Republicans can carry the state is by the importation of negroes. That is a decayed Democratic chestnut. The only way the Democrats can carry the state will be by ballot frauds so ably manipulated by the Knight of the Purple Pencil in the last election. This "goblin" will catch him yet if he don't watch out.

Judge Holt, the Democratic nominee for governor, in his speech at Charleston, claiming that the Democrats are fighting for "constitutional government," is almost as amusing as McGraw's sacrifice "to preserve to West Virginia a republican form of government."

Congressman Johnston, who swore he would never consent to a renomination, has consented. Gaius will see to it that the people of the Third district do not consent to re-election.

Bryan is looking anxiously for an official declaration from Erving Winslow and Edward Atkinson and other Aguinaldo sympathizers. It will come all right.

The suborned Goebel witnesses are rapidly swearing away the life of Powers, who was Taylor's secretary of state.

Better give your last winter's overcoat an airing, for we shall probably have colder weather next December.

The German threat to raze Pekin will no doubt raise another uprising.

It is harder to get to Pekin than it was to reach Pretoria.

Roosevelt is the "real thing" in the bounding west.

Again the legationers at Pekin are reported safe.

LITERARY NOTES.

Dodd, Mead & Company will publish this fall the latest book of Marie Correll, entitled, "The Master-Christian." This is considered by Miss Correll to be her most important novel, which was begun some three years ago, after finishing her short story, called "Jane." After making considerable progress with it she was taken seriously ill, and was obliged to lay aside all work for about a year. On her recovery she resumed her preparation of this book, and has been engaged on it steadily until the present time, when it has reached its completion.

Bret Harte has just completed for The Saturday Evening Post, a new series of inimitable funny literary caricatures. Admirers of Conan Doyle should read the Adventures of Hemlock Jones in his quest of The Stolen Cigar Case; and those who are fond of Mr. Kipling will find pleasure in Stories Three: Tales of Moo Kow, the Cow; Puskat, the warmth-loving one; the Adventures of Bearcreeper, Otherwise and Mulled-winey. In Rudolph, the Remembrer, the astute reader will find a new version of Anthony Hope's most popular story, and will understand how much more complicated it might have been had there been three kings instead of only two.

At the beginning of the next year The Bookman will begin the publication of a series of illustrated articles dealing with the great newspapers of the United States. The series on the great newspapers of continental Europe, which appeared during the first seven months of 1900, aroused considerable interest, but necessarily appealed strongly only to those American readers who had some knowledge of the press of foreign countries. On this account, the papers were limited in scope and interest. The series which is now announced, on the other hand, is one of very vital interest and import to every American. The history of the newspapers of the United States is the history of the United States. The journal which chronicles the news of a day is a document from which the historians of the future will write.

Current History for July constitutes another link in the chain of a complete history of our times, covered by this valuable periodical since 1890. It confines itself to the facts of history in South Africa, the Orient, in fact, the wide world over—is written by scholars and pervaded by a spirit of judiciousness and impartiality rarely seen in the emissions of the press in these days.

He Felt Sorry for Her.

Chicago Evening Journal: "I'm not given to musing at my time of life," said the man from Baltimore, "but while I was looking around in a department store in Philadelphia a few weeks ago, I saw a woman worth looking at twice. She was dainty and handsome, and perhaps she saw me heaving a sigh over my lost youth. At any rate, as I stood looking over the articles on the bargain counter I found her at my elbow, with a smile on her lips. Perhaps she was going to observe that if I would get a divorce and turn the wheels of time back fifteen years she'd consider my case, but before she got around to it, one of the girl employees of the store stepped up and asked her if she'd go to the office for a minute. She promptly said she would, and away they went, and a floor-walker winked at me and whispered:

"We've been watching her for three months, and I think we've got her dead to rights this time."

"I understood from that she was a shoplifter, and though I have no sympathy for criminals, I did feel a bit sorry for that woman. I hung around her awhile, hoping she might clear herself, and in about ten minutes she showed up. The store manager was with her, and making all sorts of apologies, and the girl detective who had walked her into the office looked as if she wanted the earth to open and swallow her up. I saw that she had cleared herself, and presently I left the store and took a Market street car. It was only after I sat down that I discovered a strange parcel in my overcoat pocket. It contained three new pairs of kid gloves, two lace handkerchiefs and a tie, and it didn't need much figuring on my part to know how the parcel got into my pocket. Suspecting she was shadowed, the dainty little woman had crowded up to me and got rid of her plunder. She hadn't the nerve to follow me and reclaim the parcel, and I hadn't the nerve to return it to the store. I dropped it on the street after I left the car, and it was quite a prize to the finder. If any one had seen her place the parcel in my pocket she wouldn't have saved me. The police would have called it a clear case, and yours truly would have gone to the jug."

A WHEELMAN'S tool box isn't complete without a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Heals cuts, bruises, stings, pains. Monarch over pain—2.

The baby's coming is often looked forward to as a time of dread and danger. Many women are physically unfit to become mothers. They are sick and weak

In a womanly way and may well look with fear toward the time of maternity. Intelligent preparation for this time is most essential. An athlete "trains" for months before his trial. Most women do not "train" at all and yet their trial is to be fifty times as severe as the athlete's.

During the period of gestation every woman should use every means to strengthen the organs that are to be tried. They should be kept in perfect health. The faintest symptom of disorder or disease should be promptly eliminated.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is designed to do this very thing—has been doing it for over thirty years. It is the one sure medicine for all female complaints. It is the only medicine that may be absolutely depended upon to practically abolish the pain and danger of childbirth. It is the only preparation of its kind that is the invention of a regularly graduated physician—a skilled and experienced specialist in the cure of diseases of women.

Mrs. Emerson Allen, of Dorset, Ontario, Co., Ont., writes: "I was in very poor health for a long time, dating from the birth of my little girl. I tried different doctors and different medicines. I took four bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and seem to be perfectly well again."

THE WAY OF IT.

Written for the Intelligencer.
Cape Nome is another name for the siren who sings songs that lure men to death. The greed for gold has been the undoing of thousands who have flocked to that arid stretch of sandy wastes—Wheeling Intelligencer.

This little editorial in a recent issue of the Intelligencer suggests some things:

One is led to wonder why men listen to the singing of the Siren, knowing of the power of the sinner, the effect of her songs.

Some olden truths, standing the test of the ages, are known to all men. Even women have heard them, and who would question truth?

Listen not to the tempter of souls, but to wisdom. "Whatsoever a man sows that shall he also reap." "Sin brings its own punishment." "The way of the transgressor is hard." "The soul that sinneth shall die."

But all men will not listen to wisdom. They scorn her gentle instructions. It is their desire to know for themselves, and not of another, and for such the teacher Experience waits. Her fees are heavy, and never has she been unpaid. Her instruction is thorough, and even a fool can learn to suffer.

To tell the present day young man that "the greed for gold has been the undoing of thousands" is telling him a truth that older men have learned by bitter experience.

Would that young men could value honor more than money, truth more than popularity and manhood most of all. The never-satisfying desire to get rich robs men of what is priceless. Money cannot buy it again, and the world has nothing to give in its place.

Youth, health and a contented mind! Here is happiness, if the young man only knew it, or would believe what wiser, older men could tell him.

And what of the girl of to-day? How high is her outlook upon life? How great her desire to be truly womanly? Is it only to the men the Siren sings?

The greed for gold is known to women also. That terrible hatred of poverty is stronger in woman—because she knows more about it. Women are poorer than men, and more helpless. This has become such a practical age that the average girl has no desire to fall in love with a poor man; or any serious intention of marrying him if she does.

As lovers they wait until life's best years have gone by. "Wait" until a home with every comfort is afforded, and wonder ever afterward where happiness is where it has gone and if it will ever return; and with it the joy of love in earlier days.

Is it only the men who find an "ard stretch of sandy wastes" when they sacrifice the heart's best treasures and life's highest hopes for gold?

The Siren sings also to woman, and the name is "Cape Nome."

Her Answer.

"Dear Nell," he wrote, "these violets I've made so bold to send you. Shall be my mute ambassadors; and each shall tell how deep and true the sender's love is, craving yours. For him 'What messengers more meet? Are they not typical of you.' They are so sweet."

"Dear Jack," she wrote, "your violets I have just this moment received. Their message took me by surprise. 'Twas something scarce to be believed. I send my answer back with them; What finer messengers for you? So typical of how you'll feel."
